Dear [redacted]

STAT

My heartiest congratulations to you and the entire JPRS team on the occasion of your 25th anniversary. I understand JPRS is responsible for translating more material than any other component in the government. May I assure you that you are rendering an extremely important service to the analysts of the intelligence community and others concerned with foreign affairs.

In particular, the areas of science and technology are becoming ever more important.

I want all those connected with JPRS--from the independent contractors working at home to the staff that edits, prints, and distributes your publications--to know that their efforts are appreciated.

I wish you continued success in your endeavors.

Sincerely,

William J. Casey
Director
